Graduate Student Success: Mental Health Challenges

Shataya Dingle serves as the Graduate Student Success Coach at NJCU, where she supports graduate students in navigating their academic journey, strengthening their professional skills, and maintaining balance along the way. In her role, she provides guidance, resources, and personalized strategies to help students thrive both inside and outside the classroom.

Graduate students majoring in business often face unique mental-health challenges as they juggle demanding coursework, personal responsibilities, and professional expectations. The pressure to perform academically while preparing for competitive careers can create significant stress, anxiety, and burnout. If you're feeling overwhelmed or seeking support, NJCU's Counseling Center offers both in-person and virtual sessions. Their office is located in Gilligan Student Union, Room 308. You can reach them by phone at (201) 200-3165 or by email at counselingcenter@njcu.edu.

Remember: prioritizing your mental health is not a setback — it's an investment in your success. You are capable, you are resilient, and you deserve support on your journey.
