HIGHER EDUCATION 2020

Deans and Directors:

Bernard McSherry

Founding dean, School of Business

New Jersey City University

Congratulations

As a former business leader, entrepreneur and governor of the New York Stock Exchange, McSherry brings real-world experience while grooming the next generation of business leaders in Jersey City.

Finance Series Money Lessons

As the academic partner for the New Jersey Council for Economic Education (NJCEE), NJCU is proud to sponsor NJTV's personal finance series, which was designed to help people gain more control over their finances.

This is just one of many ways that NJCU and NJCEE work to empower our community to help them change the game when it comes to making informed financial decisions.

Joe DiFiglia, Director of the NJCEE at NJCU helped put this together

NJCU Responsibility Statement

A summary of expected behaviors to limit exposure to COVID-19:

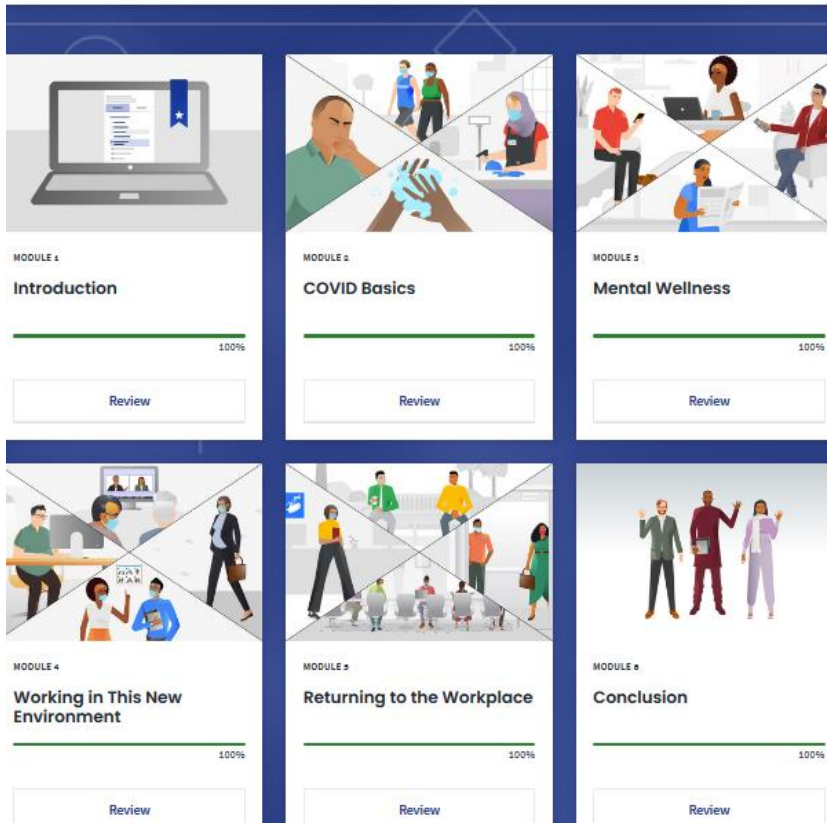

- Wearing appropriate face coverings when on campus.
- Maintaining social distancing guidelines.
- Monitoring our health each day.
- Cleaning and disinfecting shared work or classroom surfaces.
- Following quarantine guidelines.
- Cooperating with any requests for information from a contact tracer.

We will all receive a daily text message as a reminder to go through a symptom check before coming to work on campus or entering a building for class.

COVID-19 Safety Training

Staying Healthy in a Changing Environment

100%

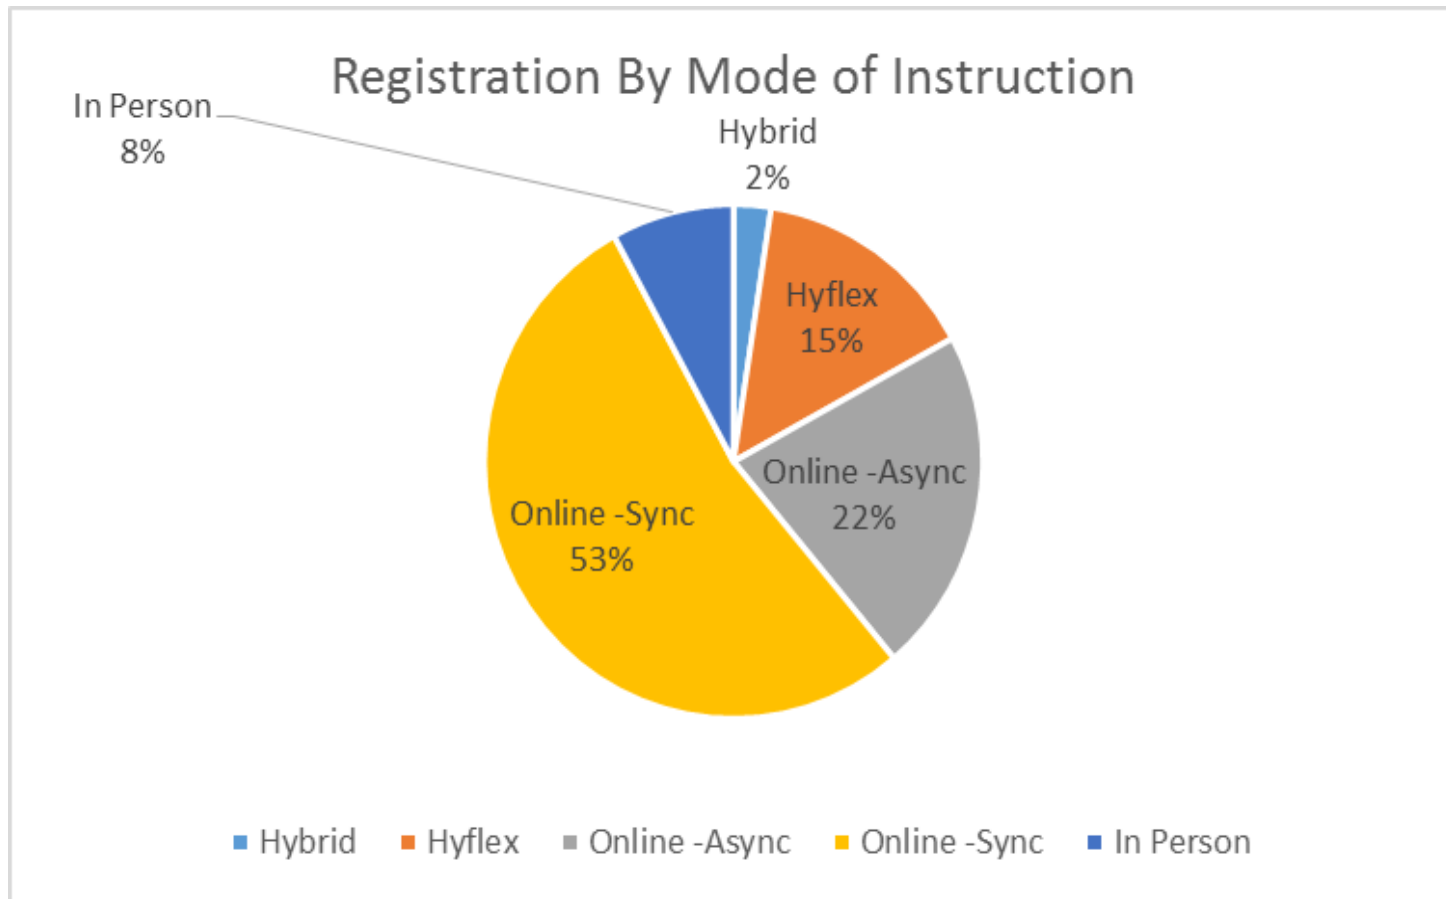

- Faculty and Staff will be required to complete this Covid-19 Safety Training.
- The training is called “Staying Healthy in a Changing Environment”
- This course provides you with information about the COVID-19 virus, mental well-being, returning to the workplace, and working remotely.
- Required as part of the OSHA Restart Standard

Title IX

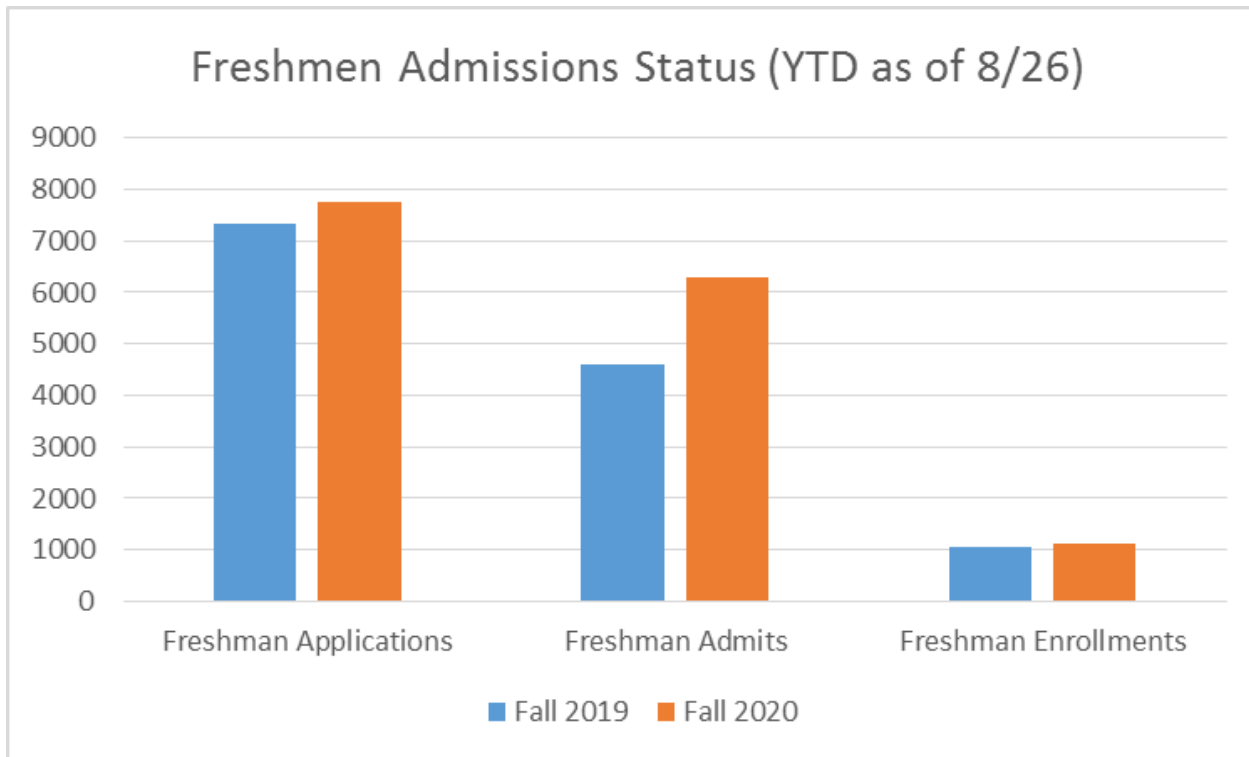

The Department of Education (ED) new rules went into effect this past 8/14. Some of the new rules involve:

- Colleges no longer have to designate most employees as “mandatory reporters”.
- Colleges can no longer use the common single-investigator model, in which an investigator writes a report and recommends a finding, but no hearing takes place.
- Colleges must investigate off-campus sexual misconduct that occurs in educational activities, such as college-owned buildings and college-sponsored trips, but not in off-campus apartments or during study abroad.
- Students can never cross-examine each other personally. Colleges must ensure that both parties have an adviser who will pose questions on their behalf.
- Colleges can raise the bar for what constitutes a violation of campus policy and, therefore, merits punishment. preponderance-of-evidence standard vs. clear and convincing

Coronavirus Relief Funds (CRF)

- NJCU submitted and was awarded its Grant application for the GEER Funds
- This application also guided the Coronavirus Relief Funds the State will allocate.
- Of the first tranche of 150M of CRF funds, NJCU was awarded 6.9M

State Budget

Funding for Senior Publics should be kept flat from last year

Additionally, NJCU was able to successfully advocate for additional monies for the Fort Monmouth Project. This is important for a number of reasons:

It continues to show the State's confidence in the project

It further improves the feasibility of the project's assumptions

It is worth noting that only NJCU and Stockton kept additional allocations from the previous year; every other school saw those removed by the Governor.
